Acknowledgement of Country

The place known as Australia comprises the traditional estates of over 250 First Nations language groups. For nearly 50 years now, Australians have increasingly formally recognised the importance of Country and First Nations peoples' relationships and protocols for conducting business in Country. Acknowledging Country shows respect for the Country, and the First Nations' continuing connections to Country.

TASA and the ISA 2023 World Congress, too, wish the cultural protocols to be known to all and observed. The Country we meet on for this World Congress is called Narrm. It is the home of the Kulin Nation Wurundjeri Woi Wurrung people. We acknowledge their sovereignty and pay our respects to their elders and ancestors. To learn more, please visit www.aiatsis.gov.au.
